Consumer Legislation Project In 2014, CEF staff continued a research project to address the problems consumers face in the modern commercial marketplace. The forthcoming project report will examine the current state of consumer protection law in the United States and propose reforms to reflect the vast changes in the marketplace that have occurred in the decades since consumer protection laws were last comprehensively updated. These changes include the advent of the Internet, the prevalence of sophisticated technology in consumer products and services, and the dramatic shift to electronic and mobile commerce. The report will assess the extent to which state and federal laws and remedies, particularly as interpreted and applied by the courts, have failed to keep up with these developments. In addition to suggesting a series of substantive consumer protection reforms, the report will analyze the current procedural mechanisms by which consumer rights may be vindicated, such as class actions, and propose changes to enhance the practical rights of consumers to jointly litigate against corporate wrongdoers, and to restore public confidence in the class action system

Online Empowerment Grant to Consumer Watchdog The CEF provides ongoing support for the work of Consumer Watchdog, a California-based non-profit charitable organization, to develop new models of public participation that encourage Americans to become more directly and deeply involved in public processes and democratic institutions. The organization has developed and expanded an innovative citizen participation model that during 2014 engaged in recruitment, training, legislative advocacy, grassroots campaigning, and public education. Consumer Watchdog reported the following activities funded by the CEF grant: A. Educating and activating citizens online. With the help of the CEF grant, Consumer Watchdog has developed the Consumerwatchdog.org web portal into a nationally-recognized site for online educational and e-advocacy activities related to pocketbook consumer issues. The Consumer Watchdog web site and its associated content is viewed by users throughout the United States who read reports, blog posts, news releases and other informational articles, submitted complaints about a variety of issues and corporate practices, and utilized the sites online action tools to voice their opinion about key consumer issues. Through its online activities, the project educates the public about corporate and political accountability efforts and provides tools for citizens to get involved in important public debates concerning corporate and political reform issues. The CEF grant has enabled the organization to expand and improve its accessibility to the public, news media and policymakers, and to assist the organization in pioneering new models of online activity. Utilizing the CEF grant, Consumer Watchdog has expanded its reach into online social media in order to expose a broader audience to Consumer Watchdogs work. In addition to web and social media tools, and a mobile app, Consumer Watchdog in 2014 initiated a series of Watchdog Bite Back educational videos. As an outgrowth of these public participation efforts, Consumer Watchdog in December 2014 began a project to enhance voter participation in elections through same-day voter registration, vote by mail, early voting and through programs administered by state agencies. B. Enhancing Digital Privacy. Consumer Watchdog focused on using its online tools to discuss the burgeoning issue area of online privacy and the increasing commercial use of personal data. During 2014, the organization drafted and vetted proposals to limit online tracking, support the right to be forgotten, and generally to protect the privacy of citizens in the digital realm. Consumer Watchdogs privacy protection efforts included petitions to state and federal agencies and web videos.
